The Librarian's description:

NIAS Library and Information Centre - NIAS LINC - contains the Nordic region's largest collection for the study of modern Asia within the social sciences and is a unique resource for Nordic Asia research. Our policy is to collect all major works on modern Asian studies in Western languages within the defined field of interest, i.e. politics, economics, modern history, anthropology, sociology and development studies. NIAS LINC Website also gives access to a considerable number of electronic resources both specifically within Asian studies and generally within the social sciences and the humanities.

The Librarian's description:

The Bibliothèque Interuniversitaire des Langues Orientales is a reference library for oriental studies. Its collections cover large geographical areas (Asia, Central Europe, Eastern Europe and the Slavic world, Middle East, Africa etc.) and thematically literature, linguistics, travelogues, the social sciences and the humanities.

It also has a museum function because of its unique and rare collections: about 13.000 works dating before 1811 or of a precious nature, and about 1.000 manuscripts

The Library is located a little apart from the campus of the Hamburg University. However, presumably in the year 2000 there will be a large Orientalist library with more than 100.000 books, uniting all libraries of the Orientalist Department.

At present there is place for 6 readers and 1 workstation for on-line search. The classification system is being revised, this will take till

The Librarian's description:

The library collections have been built up since 1868. A major expansion took place in 1935, when a merger with another institution took place. The focus was always on Indonesia. Active acquisition continued till WW II. The period 1945-1968 is covered by microfiches from materials in Cornell University's John M. Echols Collection. Since 1969 the Library maintains an acquisitions office in Jakarta. Since the 1990's the Malaysian collection is being expanded under an agreement with the National Library of Malaysia.
